TORAH DISPUTE BETWEEN BRITISH RABBIS RESULTS IN IMPASSE, BARS POST TO CRITIC

A theological dispute over the origin of the Pentateuch or Torah, the five Books of Moses, has split Britain's Jewish community and left a synagogue without a rabbi.

The argument has resulted in an impasse between Dr. Israel Brodie, the Chief Rabbi, and Dr. Louis Jacobs, former leader of the New West End Synagogue, says the New York Times, who has questioned some traditional beliefs.

Dr. Jacobs, an Orthodox Jew, has challenged the view that the Five Books were dictated by God to Moses, that the text has been preserved unchanged through the ages, and that consequently all the rules of the Jewish faith can be obtained from an infallible text.

He has argued that modern research in the Bible, the Talmud, and other classical sources of Judaism has made it necessary to reinterpret this view.

The Torah, in this view, is the product of the growth of centuries. A like argument has been raised in the Christian church. It raged in the United States at the turn of the century.

The dispute in Britain has encouraged Orthodox Jews to take sides. Dr. Jacobs is called a liberal by some, a rebel by others, and a heretic by still others.

The 48-year-old Rabbi Jacobs left the New West End Synagogue in Bayswater to become a tutor at Jews' College in London. According to Dr. Jacob's colleagues he was expected to become principal.

When that post became vacant two years ago, the Chief Rabbi withheld the certificate necessary for Dr. Jacob's appointment. Now the New West End Synagogue wants him back as its minister, but the Chief Rabbi has vetoed that move too.

The synagogue, whose members include Lord Marks and Sir Bernett Janner, a member of Parliament, has decided to challenge Dr. Brodies' veto.

While the issue remains deadlocked the synagogue is without a leader. The synagogue is one of more than 100 in the London area linked under the United Synagogue. Sir Isaac Wolfson, prominent British businessman and philanthropist, is president of the United Synagogue, says the New York Times. He is reported to be a supporter of the Chief Rabbi.

The argument has spread from the London synagogues to many of Britain's 500,000 Jews.

The argument in the Jewish community has prompted comparison with the recent dispute in the Anglican Church over arguments put forward by the Right Rev. Dr. John Robinson, Bishop of Woolwich, in his book "Honest To God." Both Dr. Jacobs and Dr.

Argentine Anti-Semitism Reportedly Gets Strong Support From Arab League Infiltraters Of Labor Ranks And Army

Anti-Semitism in Argentina has gone underground and now has strong support from the Arab League, Jewish sources report. Eighteen months ago a wave of violence in which Argentine Jews were beaten and synagogues attacked shocked the world, writes Harry James in the New York Herald Tribune. At that time blame was placed on a neo-Nazi organization called Tacuara, which allegedly received behind-the-scenes help from German Nazis who escaped to Argentina after the war.

Although there are few acts of violence now, an American Jewish Committee spokesman says that Argentinian anti-Semitism is possibly more of a danger than ever.

The Tacuara recently split into two parts, with Right-wingers who belong to the old, bomb-throwing synagogues school, going one way and the Left-wingers, who believe in pushing anti-Semitism in a more subtle manner, going another.

It is the Left-wingers who are reportedly working closely with Arab League representatives in Argentina to infiltrate the country's labor movement and armed forces. A Left-wing Tacuara leader, Anglo-Argentine mechanic Jojo Baxter, recently went on a junket to Algeria, where he met President Ben Bella, and to Egypt, where he met President Nasser.

Jewish sources say the clearest evidence of the Arab League's hand in Argentina anti-Semitism is to be found in a vitriolic mag[illegible] Argentine labor leaders. The publication gives special prominence to articles and photographs detailing meetings between Arab representatives and members of Argentina's General Labor Confederation or military officers.

Hussein Triki, Tunisian editor of Nacion Arabe, says that it is "anti-Zionist," but insists that this is different from being anti-Semitic, says the New York Herald Tribune. Triki claims that he is actually responsible for diminution of anti-Jewish violence through his lectures to Argentine nationalists telling them they should respect Judaism as a religion but should eradicate Zionism.

Triki estimates that Argentina's 450,000 Jews send $10 million each month out of the country to Israel "to pay for war against the Arabs." But he denies that he or the Arab League gives any support to Tacuara or other Argentine nationalist groups, despite the fact that he continuously delivers lectures to them.

Evidence that the Arab League anti-Zionist line has made an impact on sections of the General Labor Confederation is revealed in a Peronist - controlled labor - oriented newspaper, Companero. The paper gives big play to Arab news and makes regular anti-Semitic sallies.

But some union leaders, including Labor Confederation secretary general Jose Alonso, are disturbed by nationalist infiltration of labor ranks. He blamed Tacuara for starting a gunfight recently at a labor meeting in the port city of Rosario in which three persons were killed and five gravely injured.

The Arabs have been as active cultivating links with Argentina's armed forces as they have with its labor leaders. A large number of officers are so enchanted with Egypt's President, for example, that they proclaim themselves as "Nasseristas."

The Arabs use a whole bag of gimmicks to encourage Arab-Argentine ties. Free trips to Arab countries are readily available to officers, journalists, and labor leaders. The Argentine-Arab Cultural Association provides free courses in Arabic and Middle East affairs, with prize trips to Cairo for diligent pupils, says the New York Herald Tribune. It is a fact that few embassies in Buenos Aires spend as much money as those belonging to the Arab League nations.

Textile Merchant, 102, Left $6 Million, Or Maybe 8, To Cornell U.

Samuel Pearsall, a retired textile merchant who died recently at the age of 102 years, left the bulk of his estate, valued at more than $6,000,000, to Cornell University. Mr. Pearsall lived in Ridgewood, N.J., but his will was filed for probate in Surrogate's Court in New York because most of his financial interests were in New York City.

After making several bequests to family and friends, Mr. Pearsall directed that the rest of his estate be established as a perpetual trust "to be used by Cornell University as it sees fit." Hyman Grill, lawyer for the estate, said that a detailed inventory might show it to be worth as much as $8,000,000.

Mr. Pearsall left $20,000 " to my friend and faithful secretary, Mrs. Elsie S. Kramer, of 9312 Avenue M, Brooklyn."

He left $50,000 to his son, George, of Deland, Florida, and directed that a trust be set up to give him a yearly income of $25,000, says the New York Times. He bequeathed $10,000 to the Flatbush Boys Club of Brooklyn and made a number of small bequests to friends.

Mr. Pearsall's wife, Mrs. Lillian Pearsall, died in 1953. Although he retired in 1953, he frequently visited the offices of his firm, Pearsall & Goldsmith, 66 Leonard Street, until he was ninety-nine years old.

Cuba Aids Religious To Observe Passover And Easter

Easter and Passover were observed by Christians and Jews in Cuba in complete religious freedom, and even with some help from Cuba's officially atheistic state, says the New York Times. Roman Catholic Churches were thronged. The Ministry of Labor declared a two-day holiday out of "respect for traditions and the principle of the religious idea."

At the Jewish Community Center, a Passover supper was served for 200 persons from the four congregations in Havana. Food is tightly rationed in Cuba, but the Government ordered special quotas of chickens, eggs, and cooking oil so that all Jews might celebrate Passover.

Premier Fidel Castro's regime maintains diplomatic relations with the Vatican. Internally, its official policy is one of religious tolerance. Obviously, the political processes of a revolution that largely dispossessed the middle class have had religious consequences.

Among the 260,000 people estimated to have fled Cuba since the revolution, there were many numbers of the upper and middle class who made up the majority of church-going Roman Catholics and Protestants.

The Jewish community in Cuba has declined from an estimated 10,000 members before the revolution to fewer than 6,000. The entire Jewish population of Cuba could fit into the auditorium of the $1 million Community Center that was opened in 1954. "There are things that one cannot foresee," said a Jewish community leader.

Religious leaders, both Christian and Jewish, say that among church members who have remained in Cuba there is interest in faith and they find that [illegible] observance has been replaced by conscientious observance, says the New York Times. In the Roman Catholic parishes, although many worshippers have gone, the number of persons attending mass and taking communion is as great as before the revolution.

In a country that is considered predominantly Roman Catholic in religious upbringing, the number of regular church-goers is small, not reaching two per cent of the population, according to Catholic estimates, but priests say they find a qualitative change.

Before the revolution, religious instruction was prohibited in public schools, but there were private schools. These have been abolished, affecting primarily the Roman Catholic Schools that were taken over by the state. The official ideology of Marxist-Leninism is now taught in all schools.

In the case of the Jewish community, there is an exception to the exclusion of religious instruction from the schools. The former Jewish community school was nationalized, but now, under the name of the Albert Einstein School, it provides Hebrew and Yiddish language and cultural instruction, including Scripture, for about 65 Jewish children in the afternoons, says the New York Times. The total school enrollment is 300 students, and the curriculum is that of other public schools during the mornings.

Johnson Hails Harman, Israel Envoy To U.S., For Friendly Relations

President Johnson and other national leaders hailed Avraham Harman, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, who was honored in New York at the 56th annual dinner of Bnai Zion, American fraternal Zionist organization, at the New York Hilton Hotel, Avenue of the Americas and 54th Street, says the New York Times. In a message that was read to an overflow assemblage of 1,500, President Johnson called attention to Bnai Zion's announcement that a forest of 10,000 would be planted in Mr. Harman's name in the American Freedom Forest near Jerusalem.

The President's message said that the linking of Mr. Harman's name "with the American Freedom Park will serve as a reminder of the part that he has played in cementing the friendly relations and understanding that exist between our country and Israel."

President Johnson said that he and his wife recalled "with pleasure" when Bnai Zion in 1951 named a forest in his honor at the same location. The President lauded Bnai Zion for its efforts "in humanitarian causes and in advancing the close ties between the United States and Israel."

Dr. Harris J. Levine, honorary president of the Jewish National Fund, which carries out programs of forestation in Israel, gave Mr. Harman a citation, noting his contributions in "promoting goodwill and friendship between Israel and the United States and his distinguished public service for the welfare of the Jewish people."

In an address, W. Averell Harriman, Under Secretary of State for [illegible] Affairs, praised Israel's technical aid programs in Africa and Latin America, says the New York Times, pointing out that Israel had sent more than 900 technicians to 41 countries.

Mr. Harriman also praised Israel's public health programs and projects devoted to training foreign students. In paying tribute to Mr. Harman, Mr. Harriman said that Israel "has drawn on its own special talents and experience to help other countries in national economic planning and the development of arid areas."

In another address, Representative Ogden R. Reid, Westchester Republican, urged steps toward the restoration and peace in that area. Mr. Reid called for statesmanship by all Arab countries to further fair utilization of the Jordan River waters.

Mr. Harman, in his address, said that on the world scene his nation was "deeply conscious of the growing trend toward international cooperation."

He emphasized that conflict in the Middle East "can be avoided only through the recognition by all states in the area of each other's integrity and independence and by a readiness to compose differences by peaceful means." His nation, he added, "will always display this readiness," says the New York Times. Others who hailed Mr. Harman in addresses were Norman G. Levine, former president of Bnai Zion, who presided, and Dr. Max Nussbaum, chairman of the American Zionist Council.

Robinson question traditional views of faith.

In Britain, unlike the United States, there is a kind of "establishment" of Orthodox Jews. The Chief Rabbi is recognized by the Government as their spokesman on religious matters.

His approval is needed for the nomination of rabbis to head all the synagogues that belong to the United Hebrew Congregations in Britain. There is no corresponding office over Orthodox Jewish congregations in America.

Dr. Jacobs' position was viewed in both Orthodox and Conservative Jewish circles in the U.S. as a challenge to the authority of the Chief Rabbi. They noted that Dr. Jacobs' interpretation appeared closer to that of the Conservative theologians in the United States than to the strict Orthodox view.

The Conservative view, which is traditionalist but not literal in its interpretation of the Torah, has developed its own synagogues and institutions in the United States in the past century.

New Colours, New Looks, New Fabrics Mark The Spring 1964 Canadian Suit

Stores from coast to coast are showing new suit collections that indicate wool is leading the spring fashion parade in Canada. They look as fresh as garden flowers and include all the important suit looks for this Spring, and the price advantage of made-in-Canada labels.

The fashion department of The Wool Bureau of Canada reports a strong international trend to suits. Initiated by Paris, and widely adopted by American designers, it reflects the influence of today's informal living on fashion. More women are travelling and those who stay home also want multi-purpose clothes that span the seasons. The prettiest wool fabrics in years, and soft, relaxed suit silhouettes that are easy to wear, account for the current suit boom.

But this doesn't mean that last year's suit will do: Fashion marks certain fabrics and lines as definitely, Spring '64!

The fabrics are pure wools in two main textures, the first being the airy, nubby tweeds in subtle monotones, two-tone mixtures or a medley of several colours. These include plaids and houndstooth checks, from miniature to giant. Next and newer, though not so plentiful, are the clear-surfaced worsted twills — gabardines and whipcords. And there's a sprinkling of chalk-stripes and men's wear worsteds.

The colours have white in front, especially for trousseaus, resort and cruise wear. Navy-blue follows closely, as smart as ever, and pastels appear in a delicious assortment, with the light, bright pinks most prominent.

The look is the costume suit, or suit with a co-ordinated blouse. It's a flattering, "finished" look that eliminates the search for the right blouse. Suit blouses have softly looped, cowled or bow-tied necklines and matching edge-to-edge linings, in solid or printed pastel silks that pick up a colour from the tweed.

The shapes are still influenced by the famous Chanel suits. The braid-trimmed cardigan type with its quartet of pockets is everywhere. Newer is the double-breasted blazer. Fashion notes add that Chanel suits should include accessories of berets and low-heeled, sling-back pumps.

Softness is the key to the overall look. Skirts are slim but easy, sometimes with a pleat or two. Jackets fit only slightly, and many are open, without buttons, cut to show the blouse. A minimum of construction results in a casual, comfortable look.

There are lots of softly-tailored, longer-jacket suits, gently-shaped, and belted at the waist, or hipline. Military influence is seen in double-breasted suits, some with brass buttons and yoked, slightly wider shoulders. The popular cape appears in any of several lengths with a matching skirt, or as a little shoulder cape that fastens to the suit jacket.

Canadian manufacturers, quick to pick up the fashion trend to wool suits with their own blouses, are showing these new and pretty looks for this Spring season. Shown from left are these: an easy suit of Irving Samuel, Inc., in a multi-colour wool tweed with a wool crepe blouse, yarn-dyed to match a colour in the tweed. Second is the double-breasted blazer suit in crisp navy-blue wool worsted crepe with beige silk loop blouse, of Barry Lee, Inc. The "soft" suit of Auckie Sanft, Inc., is in criss-crossed iris and bud-green wool tweed with iris silk blouse and edge-to-edge lining, and green suede belt. A shaped suit, by Berger-Swartz Garments Ltd., in clear-surfaced black or white wool whipcord, has a longer jacket and black-and-white print bow blouse.

"Buon giorno, Signor Rabinowitz."

Rabinowitz?

Rabinowitz, what in the world are you doing on an Italian airline?

Aren't you going to Tel Aviv?

What's so surprising? For years now, one of Alitalia's busiest runs has been to Tel Aviv. From Montreal, from New York, Chicago and Boston.

Perhaps it's the kosher catering. (Optional of course). Or the service. Or the convenience of the flight schedule.

We like to think one attraction is that uniquely warm Italian atmosphere aboard Alitalia Jets.

Anyway, an awful lot of people seem to like it. And more each year. So we're expanding our schedule. (Coming soon, daily flights to Tel Aviv.)

The Rabinowitzes are going first class. If you're budget minded, Alitalia has a special group fare you may find more convenient.

Your Travel Agent can explain it best. He'll help you arrange your itinerary just the way you want it. Alitalia flies 3 weekly non-stop DC-8 jets from Canada to Italy. From Rome immediate connections to Tel Aviv.

Welcome aboard, again, Mr. and Mrs. Rabinowitz. We hope your trip to Israel this year with us is just as enjoyable as you said it was last year.

Canada Will Continue To Be A Country Of Immigration, Says National Executive Director Of The Jewish Immigrant Aid Services of Canada

The founding charter groups of Canada, the French and English, should not impose upon the immigrant and his children, the need to identify themselves with either of these groups, stated Dr. Joseph Kage, of Montreal, at the annual meeting of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Services of Canada held in Toronto.

The two original founding groups, Dr. Kage said, are the parents of present-day Canada. Their offspring and the newcomer are to be considered as children, who ought to be permitted to develop their own specific Canadian personalities based on the recognition of the bi-national and bi-cultural heritage of Canada's past and its evolving future.

Speaking on "The Immigrant In Face Of Bi-culturalism and Bi-nationalism," Dr. Kage stressed that it is difficult to divide the history of human civilization into precisely defined periods. "The warp and the woof of today has been spun in all its yesterdays, as surely as tomorrow is a continuation of the present. Nevertheless, in human history, as in the history of an individual, there are periods remarkable for their events, for their dreams, and for the forces of their aspirations."

Canada, the speaker said, is undergoing such a period at the present time. Hence, the issues of accommodation between those of English and French origin represent a most important phase in Canadian development and are a matter of concern for every Canadian.

Dr. Kage said that the history of French-Canadian nationalism can be traced back to Jacques Cartier, who landed at Gaspe in 1534, planted the "Fleur de Lis," and took possession of the territory in the name of the King of France. He supported the view of the prominent French-Canadian historian, Dr. Guy Frégault, who suggested that most accounts given by historians on Canada attempted to reconstruct the Canadian society under the French regime along the lines of a defeated and crushed nation.

These historians read history backwards, arriving at the conclusion that, under the French regime, Canada was a rustic society, dominated by the peaceful work of its countryside. In reality, however, French Canada possessed political and social institutions borrowed from the motherland, and adapted to the conditions of the New World.

The national idea continued to permeate the life of French Canada. The present upsurge could be related to the recent developments such as the quest for economic advancement, modernization, revitalization of French culture, growth of the middle class, etc.

There seems to be fear in some quarters that to give in to the demands of the Province of Quebec regarding greater use of French, bi-culturalism, or re-allocation of the sources of taxation, is an actual impossibility. English-speaking Canada, said Dr. Kage, should try to analyze whether any real harm could come from the modifications proposed by Quebec. If none can be pointed out, then the requests should be accepted.

Dr. Kage stressed that bi-culturalism is a much wider issue than bi-lingualism. Bi-culturalism implies a sense of equality, shared by both sides and that is not easy to reach, for the two sides rarely are equal. If they were, the problem would not exist. On the other hand, learning a language should not pose any greater difficulty than mastering an academic subject. He pointed out the need for revision in the curriculum of French instruction that would place more emphasis on spoken language and French-Canadian lore.

The speaker also discussed the evolution of the Canadian immigration policy, pointing out that Canada has been and will continue to be a country of immigration. He analyzed the latest pronouncements made by various officials and expressed the view that Canada will be aiming at an annual immigration rate of about one percent of its population, providing that favourable economic conditions will continue.

The global aspects of the present day immigration regulations represent a dramatic change in Canadian immigration policy. Their actual manifestations must, of course, be tested in practice, he said, but, at least in theory, a new approach to immigration has been promulgated.

Dr. Kage continued: "If the theory behind the new regulations will be implemented by an honest, sincere effort to interpret all that the regulations imply, then the present immigration policy should be administered in a spirit which will bring forth the following results: a) gear immigration to the country's economic growth potential; b) avoid a "depression psychology"; c) advance the principle of non-discrimination; d) be related to actual situations of groups in special need of resettlement; e) be determined to enhance the flow of immigration; f) be permeated with a humanitarian approach to human welfare."

Dr. Kage called for a policy of unified Canada based on a democratic approach which would allow re-allocation of real authority to the provinces; a real effort in helping Quebec in its quest for industrialization, better education, wider bi-lingualism, and bi-culturalism; the recognition that French-Canada is different, yet Canadian, and its desires must be viewed with sympathy and confidence.

He stressed, however, that while nationalism has many positive aspects, it can also become a destructive force. In this age of the jet and the atom, interdependence between states and nations is a political and economic reality, and in this sense, we are all stateless.

In the present dialogue between the charter groups, New Canadians cannot and should not remain mere bystanders. It is their duty to participate in this dialogue as a manifestation of the basic desire that William James, so aptly called a wholesome acceptance of one's self.

They have also an obligation to participate as Canadians who are attempting to evolve an electric Canadian culture, based on the French-English heritage. In evolving this culture, all Canadians must plod doggedly on, keeping one eye to the distant ideal, and the other on the ground, to meet the day-to-day realities of Canadian life.

Dr. Kage is the national executive director of JIAS and the author of several books, the most recent of which is "Chapter One, Chapitre Premier", a bilingual edition of sketches of Canadian life under the French regime.

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

'64 Chevrolet Impala Sport Sedan and (background) Impala Sport Coupe

'64 Jet-smooth Luxury Chevrolet

A hill is just something to admire the view from when you're driving a '64 Chevrolet. With engines up to a 425-hp V8*, getting from one side to the other wouldn't be much easier if somebody had put a tunnel there.

And if Chevrolet can go over a whole mountain so you hardly feel it, you can imagine how it goes over plain old bumps. Jet-smooth, of course. We put a big coil spring at all four wheels to soak up the bumps just as fast as they come.

As you'd expect, Chevrolet matches performance with outstanding luxury, inside that big beautiful Body by Fisher. All kinds of stretch-out room, wide thick-cushioned seats, yards of deep-twist carpeting and elegant fabric and vinyl upholstery — all make you feel good just being there.

With all its looks and luxury, you can see how anyone might get the idea that this great highway performer is a high-priced car. Unless, of course, they happened to look first at its reasonable Chevrolet price.

W.J.C. WITNESSES OF NAZI CRIMES URGED TO BE IN TOUCH WITH N.Y. INSTITUTE

World Jewish Congress headquarters in New York is presently involved in tracing witnesses in connection with almost 200 cases of Nazi criminals who are either being investigated or about to be tried by the West German authorities. The search for witnesses had been under the direction of the late Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director of the Institute of Jewish Affairs of the WJC, who died suddenly very recently.

Samuel Bronfman, chairman of the North American Executive of the WJC, announced that the Institute would carry on this task and expressed the hope that all persons who may be able to help in this connection should communicate with the Institute of Jewish Affairs, World Jewish Congress, 15 East 84th Street, New York 28, N.Y.

Mr. Bronfman said that witnesses with whom the late Dr. Robinson had been in contact, should continue to be in touch with the Institute, whose staff will work with them in preparation of evidence that they may have to offer.

"This was a dedicated piece of work that Nehemiah Robinson almost single-handedly carried out," Mr. Bronfman said. "I know from the letters of praise and commendation that we have received from many West German prosecuting authorities, how invaluable Dr. Robinson's work in this direction was. The World Jewish Congress will carry on this task so that those responsible for the crimes against the Jews under the Nazis will not go unpunished."

★ LABOR ZIONIST ★

Movement Of Canada: Leon Kronitz, national president, and Bernard M. Bloomfield, national president of the Canadian Histadrut Campaign reported on their recent trip to Israel at a meeting of the Labor Zionist Movement. Mr. Kronitz stressed the change of attitude on the part of the government of Israel towards the Zionist Movement. At last year's Actions Committee meeting, Israelis from the Prime Minister down, tended to look at the World Zionist Organization with contempt. The joint declaration issued at this year's session of the Committee by the Government of Israel and the executive of the World Zionist Organization called for mutual action to strengthen Zionism. Prime Minister Levi Eshkol and the other members of the Cabinet emphasized the fact that a meaningful relationship between Diaspora Jewry and Israel depends on a Zionist Movement strong enough to revitalize local Jewish communities everywhere. Now it is up to the Zionists themselves to demonstrate what can be accomplished in regard to Jewish education; a new emphasis on the unity of the Jewish people in all parts of the globe; assistance to Israel in meeting its financial needs; and, immigration to Israel. Mr. Bloomfield described the Amal Trade School, clinics, and other Histadrut institutions built by the Canadian Histadrut Campaign. He pointed out the crucial role of the Trade Schools since there is no free secondary education in Israel, said that the Campaign, has undertaken to build a number of Apprentice Schools in Israel so that youngsters who are forced, for economic reasons, to go to work immediately after elementary school can learn a trade on a part-time basis. Abraham Shurem, executive director of the Campaign, who visited Israel together with Mr. Bloomfield, described the changes in Israel's economic and industrial structure in recent months. Samuel Broder, national treasurer of the Labor Zionist Movement of Canada, and Canadian vice-president of the Farband Labor Zionist Order, was chairman.

For these reasons, you are invited to apply for a Social Insurance Number, even if you are not a contributor to the unemployment insurance plan.
If you haven't yet applied, here's what you do.
IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER your employer will give you an application form. Fill it out and return to your employer promptly.
IF YOU ARE UNEMPLOYED and drawing benefit you will complete an application form when you report to the Unemployment Insurance Commission in person or by mail.
IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER registered with the Commission, you will receive application forms automatically. American Jewish Conference On Soviet Jewry

The Canadian Jewish Congress was represented at the American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry, in Washington, by Samuel Lewin, which adopted the following statement and resolutions:

We, as representatives of the major national American Jewish organizations, have met for the past two days in solemn assembly in Washington, D. C. to express with one voice our deep concern with and our determination to protest the plight of our Jewish brethren in the Soviet Union.

Soviet Jewry constitutes the second largest Jewish community in the world and is the last remnant of the once great East European Jewish community. This remnant exists largely because of the heroic resistence of the Soviet Union to the Nazi hordes which destroyed the great majority of European Jewry.

The approximately three million Jews of the U.S.S.R. have a special claim on the conscience of all who are zealous of securing human rights, and, more particularly, on the conscience of all Jewry. Soviet Jews are the heirs of a tradition that stretches unbroken over one thousand years of Jewish history in Eastern Europe, a tradition which produced an enduring heritage of scholarship, piety, and ethical idealism. They are the kin of the millions who went forth from Russia to other countries, bringing with them the social idealism of their tradition enhancing the cultures of their new lands.

With the lessening of repression and persecution so widely acclaimed following the death of Stalin, it was hoped that the Soviet Jews would share in the new atmosphere of relaxation of tensions. Now, however, with anguish and indignation, we witness Soviet Jewry being denied its natural right of group existence. It is fragmented from within and kept isolated from without. Though formally recognized as a nationality and as a religious group, the Soviet Jewish community is deprived of those rights granted to other nationalities and other major religious bodies in the U.S.S.R. A process of attrition forces Soviet Jews to live only a most attenuated Jewish life and threatens to crush their spirit and sever their ties with the Jewish people.

Soviet Jewish youth, traumatized by the Nazi holocaust and by Stalin's anti-Semitic excesses, are now seeking to re-establish their links with Jewish life. But they are denied even the most meager opportunity to learn, enhance, and transmit their Jewish heritage.

The whole of Jewish culture, and Yiddish artistic and literary expression in particular, once so flourishing in the U.S.S.R., are now represented by the merest tokens. The bonds of Soviet Jewry with their tradition, are being destroyed by increasing restrictions against fundamental and sacred Jewish practices. Synagogues are closed down; the public production and distribution of matzoth and of other essential religious articles are banned. Soviet Jews are cut off from contact with their brethren at home and abroad. Jewish opportunities in higher education and in certain fields of employment are being limited.

Simultaneously, a campaign of villification of the Jewish past and present is conducted in the press and other official publications. Judaism and Jewish history are falsified. Anti-Semitic stereotypes are exploited to portray the synagogue as a breeding ground of economic and social crimes.

We are appalled at the discriminatory application of maximum penalties, including the death sentence, against Jews for alleged economic crimes and that they are singled out in the press in a calculated attempt to exacerbate public anti-Semitism.

We are moved by the plight of thousands of Soviet Jews whose families were shattered or separated by the Nazi devastation and who are prevented from rejoining their remaining kin in the United States, Israel, and other countries.

We appeal to the Soviet government to redress these wrongs, to restore the rights of Jews and of the Jewish community, and to grant the equality with other religious and nationality groups as required by Soviet constitution and law.

We make this appeal within the framework of our ardent desire to see an end to the cold war and lessen and hopefully eradicate the existing international tensions. Our aim is to mobilize public opinion into a moral force which will save Soviet Jewry from spiritual annihilation.

We who are assembled here are bound by the moral imperative of our history, which demands that we speak out on the fate of our brothers in the Soviet Union. We pray that our voice will be heard and heeded.

The American Jewish Conference on Soviet Jewry protests the denial to Soviet Jews of the basic institutions and facilities granted to other religious and nationality groups within the Soviet Union. Considerations of humanity and justice require the Soviet Government:

1. To declare its policy of eradicating anti-Semitism by a vigorous educational effort conducted by Government and Party.
2. To permit the free functioning of synagogues and private prayer meetings.
3. To remove hindrances to the observance of sacred rites such as religious burial and circumcision.
4. To make possible the production and distribution of phylacteries, prayer shawls, mezruzoth, religious calendars, and other religious articles.
5. To restore all rights and facilities for the production and distribution of matzoth and kosher food.
6. To make available facilities to publish Hebrew Bibles, prayerbooks, and other religious texts in the necessary quantities.
7. To permit the organization of a nation-wide federation of synagogues.
8. To sanction the association of such a federation with organizations of co-religionists abroad.
9. To permit Jews to make religious pilgrimage to the Holy places in Israel.
10. To make it possible to allow all qualified applicants to attend the Moscow Yeshivah (Seminary), to provide facilities for the establishment of additional Yeshivot as needed, and to enable rabbinical students to study at seminaries abroad.
11. To provide schools and other facilities for the study of Yiddish and Hebrew, and of Jewish history, literature and culture.
12. To permit Jewish writers, artists, and other intellectuals to create their own institutions for the encouragement of Jewish cultural and artistic life.
13. To re-establish a Yiddish publishing house and to publish books in Yiddish by classical and contemporary Jewish writers.
14. To re-establish Yiddish state theatres in major centres of Jewish population and to publish Yiddish-Language newspapers with national circulation.
15. To eliminate discrimination against Jews in all areas of Soviet public life.
16. To end all propaganda campaigns which use anti-Semitic stereotypes, implied or overt.
17. To halt the discriminatory application of maximum penalties, including the death sentence, against Jews for alleged economic crimes.
18. To make possible on humanitarian grounds for Soviet Jews who are members of families separated as a result of the Nazi holocaust to be reunited with their relatives abroad.

We appeal for a redress of these and other wrongs and sufferings; for the elimination of discrimination; and for the full restoration of Jewish rights in the U.S.S.R.

A.J.C. Asks U. S. To Urge Germany To Extend Criminal Code 20 Years To Prosecute For War Murders

The American Jewish Congress urged that West Germany's twenty-year statute of limitations against prosecution for major Nazi war crimes, due to become effective next year, be extended for another twenty years.

In identical letters to U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and to Karl Heinrich Knappstein, West German Ambassador to the U.S., Dr. Joachim Prinz, president of the Congress, declared:

"Our purpose is not the endless pursuit of these criminals merely for retribution. We are concerned to make clear to all the peoples of the world that guilt for the crimes of the Nazi era is indelible and inexpungable. We are concerned to impress upon the German people that the Hitler period cannot be redeemed unless they are prepared to remember, during the life of the present generation at least, the horror of those acts and the heartbreak of those days."

Dr. Prinz, a former rabbi of Berlin who was expelled from Germany in 1937 for his anti-Nazi activities, noted that most of the states of the United States allow no statute of limitations for crimes involving murder or for crimes for which a capital sentence may be imposed.

"There are some acts too gross to gain absolution by the mere passage of time," Dr. Prinz declared. "For this reason, we urge the West German parliament to amend its criminal code to allow prosecution of war crimes involving a charge of murder for at least an additional twenty-year period.

"We call upon the Department of State, in recognition of our country's national investment in the creation of a genuinely democratic state in West Germany, to use every resource in urging German authorities not to foreclose the just trial of Nazi war criminals."

Dr. Prinz continued: "The German people cannot conquer anti-Semitism until they are prepared to look it squarely in the face, to recount and to admit the tragedy it has produced, and to acknowledge national complicity in its ugliness and brutality."

In his letter, Dr. Prinz also expressed "deep disquiet" at what he termed "the vast discrepancy between the gravity of the charges brought against war criminals in German courts and the incredible leniency of the sentences that have been imposed." Just recently Dr. Prinz noted, a Nazi SS captain, Wilhelm Doering, found guilty of the death of 669 Russian Jews and 16 retarded children, was sentenced to only four years imprisonment.

Under the statute of limitations that goes into effect in May, 1965, Dr. Prinz said: "The many Nazi criminals still in hiding will, by the simple fact of disguise, have managed to purchase permanent immunity. Earlier statutes of limitations already prevent prosecution for war crimes other than those of murder. The new statute will permanently bar war crimes prosecutions in every category."

The American Jewish Congress leader said, "The cutting-off of future prosecutions for Nazi war crimes appears to be part of a coordinated effort to shield from further public view some of those who share responsibility for the infamous acts of the Nazis.

"We cannot understand the high percentage of disappearances, suicides, accidental deaths, and other strange events that have prevented public examination of the testimony of accused war criminals," Dr. Prinz declared. "The chief prosecutor for the State of Hesse, Fritz Bauer, has himself expressed the suspicion that there may still operate in Germany an organized and effective underground determined to suppress further disclosures that may incriminate other highly-placed officials.

"We cannot now know whether such information exists. We will never know if the statute of limitations is allowed to become operative in 1965."

Coffee And Matzoh Is What Russian Doctors Had At Montreal Reception

An International Doctors' Conference on General Practice, held in Montreal, was attended by delegates from Russia. The head of the Russian delegation was Dr. Yuri G. Antonov, Chief Doctor at Moscow's largest hospital, the 2,200-bed Bodkin City Hospital, and a member of the praesidium of the Central Committee of the Medical Workers Trade Union. Dr. Antonov was invited to visit the Jewish General Hospital in Montreal, which he did accompanied by a Mr. Akopov, a Moscow lawyer, who also attends the Conference as an interpreter.

Following a tour of the hospital, a reception was arranged for the Russian visitors (coffee and matzoth because of Passover), during which there was an exchange of views on the position of Jews in Russia. Participating in the interview were Dr. A. Stilman, Dr. M. Snarch (who is also a delegate to the International Conference) and the associate education director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, Samuel Lewin.
